

Working with Justice Involved Women

Criminal justice system practitioners can achieve more successful outcomes with justice involved women when they become more gender informed.

Women are entering the criminal justice system at an alarming rate

Most justice involved women are arrested for non-violent crimes

Since 1985, the number of women in prison has increased at a faster rate than men¹

Of all arrests of women in 2013²

Many justice involved women share similar life circumstances that are unique from men

77-98% of incarcerated women have experienced trauma (including interpersonal violence and/or physical/sexual abuse)³

60% of women in prison reported using drugs just prior to their offense (compared to 56% of men)⁵

73% of women in prison reported a mental health problem⁴

Up to half of women who are incarcerated were homeless in the month before their incarceration⁶

Maternal incarceration significantly impacts children

147,700 children had a mother in prison in 2007, up 131% from 1991⁸

64% of mothers in state prison lived with at least one of their children just prior to imprisonment⁷

Race/Ethnicity

In 2013, percentage of women in state or federal prisons⁹

Education

42% of women in state prisons have not completed high school¹⁰

Employment

Women's unique risk and needs must be acknowledged and addressed in an integrated manner across all stages of the justice system

Utilize a multi-faceted approach from intake to service planning to aftercare that is:¹²

- Relational
- Strengths-based
- Trauma-informed
- Culturally Competent
- Holistic

Provide pregnant women in correctional facilities with special privileges, such as:¹³

- Limited or non-use of restraints
- Bottom bunk assignments and light work duty
- Additional snacks/milk to meet their nutritional needs
- Ongoing obstetric appointments, prenatal vitamins, social support and counseling, birth education, and transportation to and from the hospital

Take advantage of available resources

NRCJIW provides resources and tools to support practitioners within courts, correctional facilities and community settings to achieve successful outcomes with justice involved women.
